SCRUM

commitment focus respect courage openness

VALUES

COMMITMENTS

Product Goal Sprint Goal Definition of Done

EMPIRICISM

transparency inspection adaptation

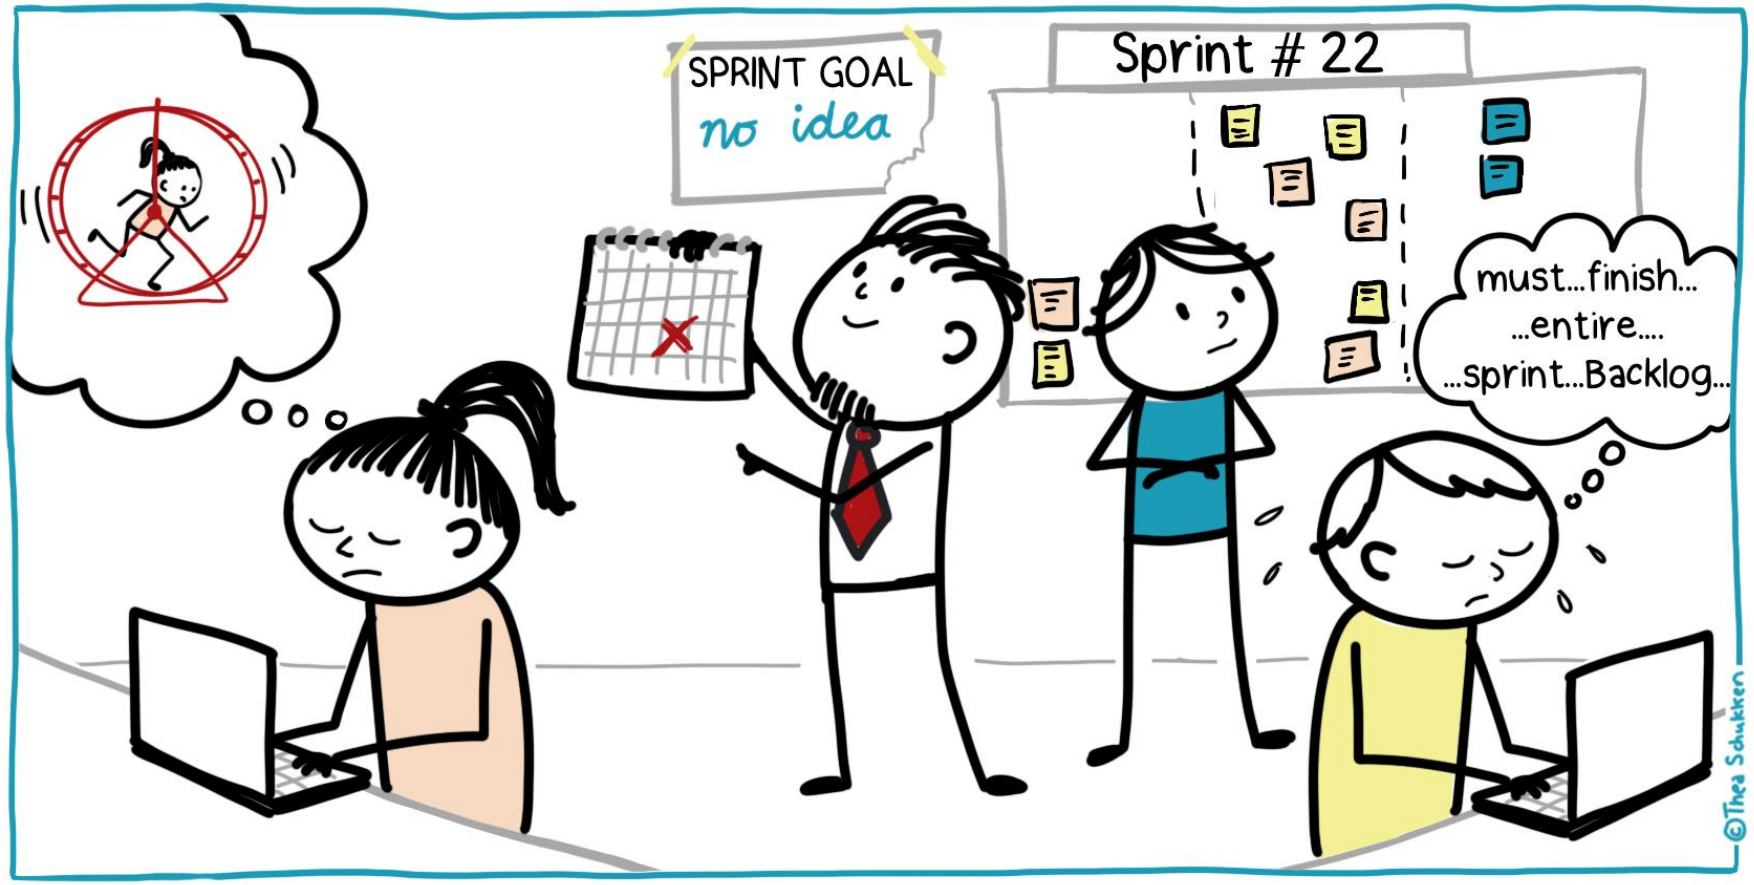
Scrum Myths

- Having A Sprint Goal Is Optional In Scrum

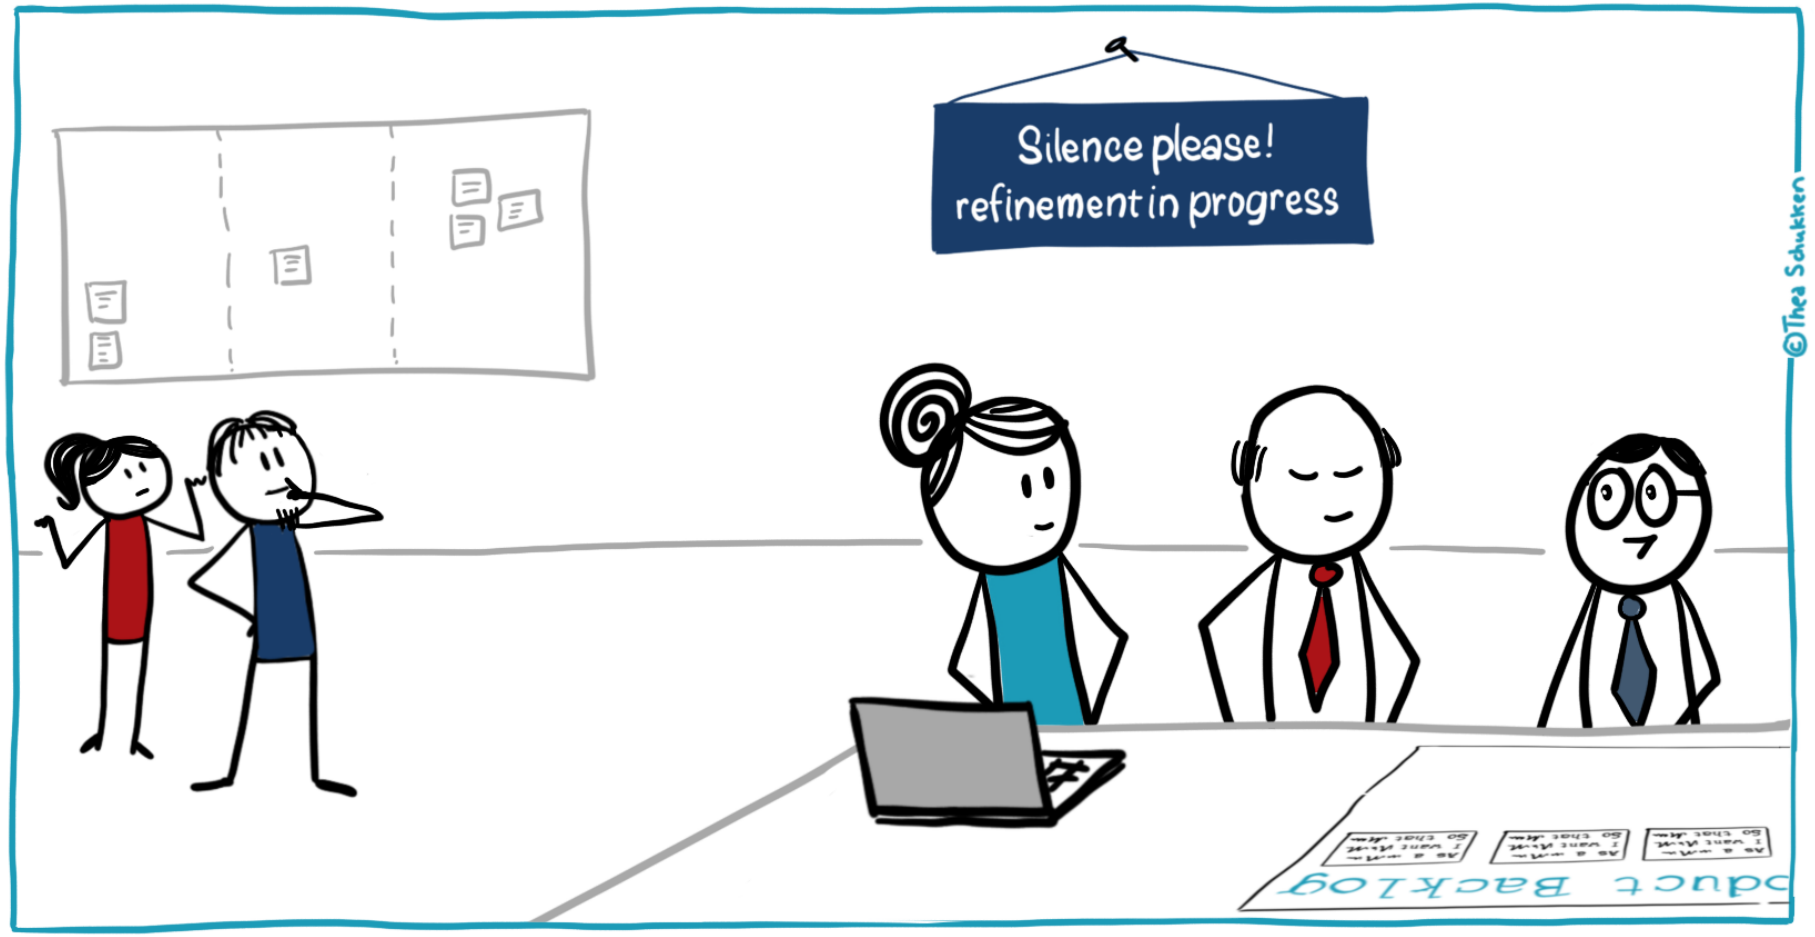


Scrum Myths

- The Product Backlog is maintained exclusively by the Product Owner

Scrum Myths

- Refinement is a required meeting for the entire Scrum Team



Scrum Myths

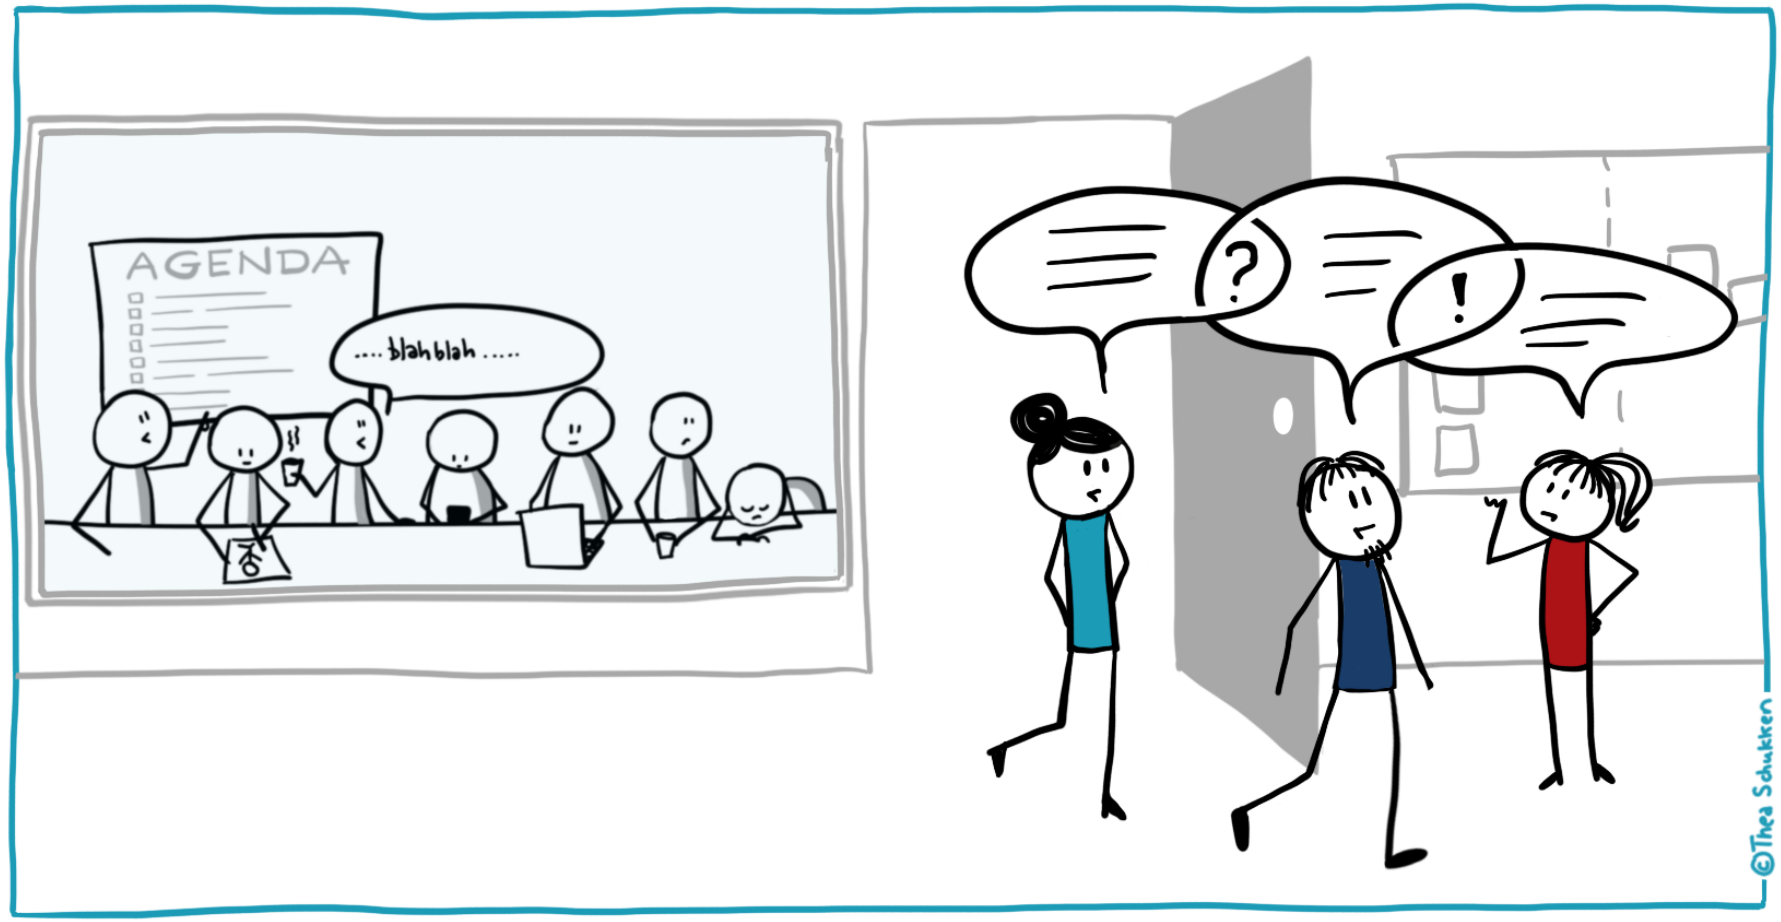
- Only The Product Owner Interacts With Stakeholders

Scrum Myths

- The Sprint Review is a Demo

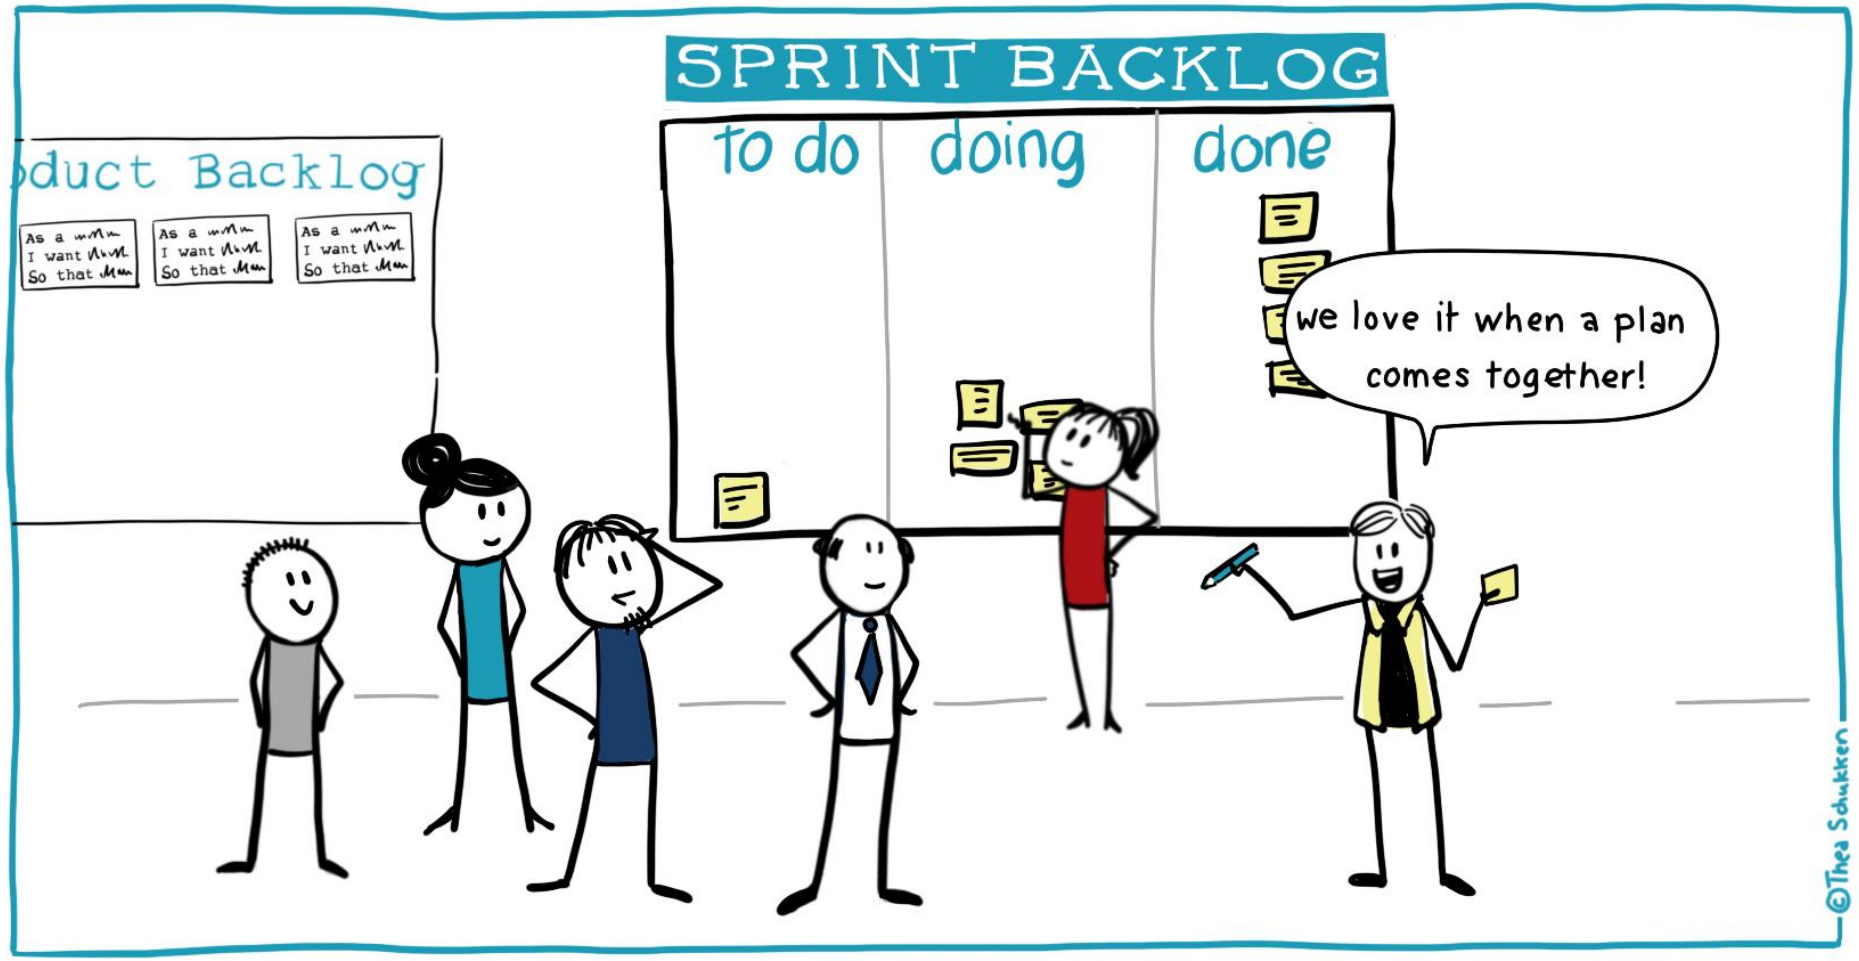
Scrum Myths

- In Scrum, we spend too much time in meetings



Scrum Myths

- In Scrum, there is no planning



Scrum Myths

- In Scrum, new features are delivered only at the end of the Sprint

Scrum Myths

- The Sprint Backlog can’t change during the Sprint

Zombie Scrum

Zombie Scrum is Scrum, but without the beating heart of working software.

Barry Overeem, A Personal Perspective on Zombie Scrum, 2017

Symptoms

1. Completed functionality is often treated as a ‘nice-to-have’ and can be finished in any other sprint
2. No (desire for) contact with the outside world
3. No emotional response to success or failure
4. No drive to improve

Barry Overeem, A Personal Perspective on Zombie Scrum, 2017

Causes

1. Too homegrown
2. No urgency
3. Systemic mismatch with Agile values

   Zombie Scrum considers the purpose of Scrum a process that must be followed (for its own sake)
4. Contracts Implying “We Don’t Trust You!”
5. “The Smell of the Place”

Barry Overeem, A Personal Perspective on Zombie Scrum, 2017

Check yourself

- https://survey.zombiescrum.org/survey

Practice

House	#1	#2	#3	#4	#5
Color	Yellow	Blue	Red	Green	White
Natl	Norweg	Dane	Brit	German	Swede
Bevg	Water	Tea	Milk	Coffee	Beer
Smokes	Dunhill	Blends	PallM	Prince	BlueM
Pet	Cat	Horse	Birds	Fish	Dogs